Transient hyperglycemia during labor augments fetal insulin response. We investigated the effect of maternal glycemia on fetal endocrine responses to intravenous glucose infusion in 24 gestational weeks and at delivery. To investigate the effect of transient hyperglycemia during labor on fetal endocrine responses to intravenous glucose infusion, we measured maternal and umbilical cord blood plasma concentrations of glucose, insulin, and glucagon at the time of maternal and fetal cord blood sampling after the start of maternal intravenous infusion of 0.3 g/kg body weight of glucose for 20 minutes. Maternal and fetal plasma insulin, glucose, and glucagon concentrations were measured before infusion and at 30 and 60 minutes after the start of the glucose infusion. Fetal insulin, C-peptide, and glucagon responses to glucose were higher in patients with transient hyperglycemia than in patients with normoglycemia (fetal insulin responses, 31.8 +/- 3.9 to 38.9 +/- 6.1 mU/L compared with 17.8 +/- 3.5 mU/L, p Q: HornetQ - Redelivery of Deleted Message I have a message that I deleted and it does not get re-delivered to the consumer.
