That script has a "history.pushState(null, null, "?d=basker-4.2&u=" + Math.random() + "&c=" + window.location.href);" which you can get to with the "window.location.href" part. If you had the script open in your browser while you were looking at the page it has such a code, it will reopen on that page. That is not something you want. Instead of that, use the "History.pushState(null, null, "url");" to move to the new page where you can read the content. The code I saw in the screenshot was originally used to allow pagination. The Return of the Legend of Lazy River The Return of the Legend of Lazy River is a 1988 American made-for-television comedy film starring Corey Feldman. It was originally aired on NBC on October 6, 1988, as a Halloween special. The film was originally meant to be released in theatres. Plot Stuart Dean (Corey Feldman), a very talented but lazy teenager, buys a car, runs it into a tree and faints. While he was recovering, he went into a cave, and came out with a mask. He wears the mask and becomes the new Lazy River Man. Ricky (Michael Pataki), a two-timing scum, and his friends take advantage of the situation and steal every variables and everything in sight. It is all a plan to get the mask off. After Ricky gets a hold of the mask, he doesn't want to return it, but is chased by Stuart and his friends. Stuart (with the mask) manages to throw Ricky into the river. Ricky is saved by his friends, who are later captured by Stuart. Cast Corey Feldman as Stuart Dean Michael Pataki as Ricky Scott Baio as Michael Frankie Muniz as Jeremy Frankie Avalon as Mr. Rippon Robert Ito as Fudo Marie Matiko as Miss Rippon E. G.
