Leading the protest on Saturday, which went ahead despite a police ban, was singer-songwriter Pilita Corrales, a former Communist and one of the biggest political stars in the Philippines. She alleged that the US embassy was paying protesters for some of the crowd estimates of 30,000 to 40,000 people – suggesting that the Marcos family had a role in organising the event. Marcos' family say that they were unaware of any US embassy involvement. The largest protest in recent years, it saw people carrying placards reading: "Hands off the Marcos Palace", "Go home Ferdinand", "Marcos Family Free or Dead" and "Elections without Marcos". Many protesters carried photos of Marcos, 77a5ca646e
