Q: jQuery how to access id of clicked.option 1 2 3 $(document).on('click', '.option', function(e){ alert($(this).attr('id')); //doesn't work }); How do I catch the id of the clicked.option? I tried event.target but that doesn't work neither. Fiddle A: Event.target is only useful for capturing the original event. I have two instances of the App Engine Flexible with different IP address, and they both work fine. I also have a connection to MySQL cluster and Redis instance running and both work fine. I want to have two copies of the same Redis instance. I don't want to use the AppEngine Shared Datastore, because I need to save sensitive data. I started the instance through gcloud but I couldn't find any way of letting it discover the other instance. I should do something like this, right? redis_upstart -l -p 6379 --noauth The startup script returns WARNING: WARNING: NONE 3e33713323
