Ride-hailing companies rein in employees' free time and treating them as a "service" - hhs ====== sys_64738 It's sad that you can't enjoy a leisurely breakfast with your family anymore. ~~~ Cthulhu_ Not really - that's the kind of breakfast you have at a bakery, coffee shop and similar places. Those are still open and still popular in Norway (which I am from) as well as in the UK. The issue is that the existence of these'services' made many more places open later - or after work - or on the weekend. When every coffee shop is either closed (like usuall closed on Sunday), or has limited hours, even after work time is just that much more later. Since there aren't enough family run places that stay open for a long time, then the logic to closing most places at a reasonable hour is already there. This is the same with supermarkets and other convenience stores - they have these crazy hours, and there's not enough family run places that stay open late. It's a chicken and egg situation - the one needs to make the other one inefficient first. Rated 4 out of 5Â by Melissa25 Love this top I have 2 of these tops and they have worked well for me. This top fits a bit looser than I expected and the waist is a bit small but that is easy to fix. I am 5'4" and usually size down. It looks cute on and is very comfortable. For example, a business can purchase goods from another business (e.g., from an e-commerce website), use an enterprise resource planning (ERP) system to input information into the company's accounting system, and communicate with customers, each of which can be done on a networked system. In some cases, a business network can support multiple business entities that share common resources (e.g., a database, a website, an ERP system, etc.). Many such businesses use a network-based business workflow system for managing such activities, such as those supported by workflow engines including the Business Process Management (BPM) systems from the International Business Machines Corporation, including the Workflow Automation, Design & Enablement (WADEN) platform and the Business Process Execution Language (BPEL). Other software-as-a-service (SaaS) solutions are also available that can support workflow processes.Q: Form with negative validation amount I would like to validate a form with jQuery and PHP. If the given amount is -1 it should send a mail to administrator with the "amount negative". But I don't know how to get the value of amount and validate it with PHP. $('.amount').change(function() { var amount = $('#amount').val(); $.post('scripts/php/sendmail.php', { amount: amount }, function(data) { if (data == "1") { alert("Send mail"); } });
